COVER ARTWORK Sydney Chapados

Just as anthropologists challenge the illusory desires that underpin technological and state fixes to political and ecological crisis, we are challenged to refuse a liberal settlement
as the raison d'être of sociocultural anthropology.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The Contingent Horizons editorial collective would like to thank the Anthropology Department at York University for their generous support of the journal, including the department chair Shubhra Guruani and the administrative staff, Colleen Robinson, Diana Baldassi, and Roshan Singh. Thank you to Tomasz Mrozewski for the support and troubleshooting with the Open Journal System (OJS). A special thanks to our faculty advisor, Othon Alexandrakis, who has supported the journal since its beginnings in his method fieldwork class of 2013 and continues to offer his guidance to the editorial collective. We are grateful to all the faculty and students in the department who enthusiastically support, promote, and contribute to the journal.

Each year the editorial collective is grateful to receive submissions from graduate and undergraduate students across Canada and the world. To our peer reviewers, thank you for contributing your expertise and time to the journal. A heartfelt thank you to Kathe Gray for continuing to offer her expert design skills to the journal and making the print issue a reality.

Thank you to all the authors whose work is published in this issue. The editorial process and publication of this volume was significantly delayed by the COVID-19 pandemic as authors, reviewers, and ourselves as editors had to deal with the new global reality and challenges to continuing academic work. We are so grateful for the time and energy that the authors dedicated to this issue, and especially for their patience as we adjusted to conducting our editorial work remotely.
